What we have, here, is a bunch of 20-somethings putting themselves in danger (in the image with the car, the person was trying to get away, but the 'catcher' wouldn't move. He backed up, because they placed their truck in front of his car), then they proceed to chase their target around the city, a couple of catchers in the back of the truck. Well, we can now how well things are going for the Creep Catchers movement, online. Their primary URL (creepcatcher.ca) is offline, the account suspended. The secondary URL (creepcatchers.ca) is in the hands of a tattoo shop.

Many are moving from Facebook Pages to Facebook Groups (likely so they can better control their message and who has access for viewing and conversations). Only a handful of YouTube accounts and only one Twitter account that I seen, so far.

Also seeing some movement. People vocally stepping away from the organizations and some doing so with little or no mention.

The fact that these Creep Catchers do not seem to fully grasp the dangerous situations that they put themselves in, continues to boggle me. This one is especially shocking.

They know next to nothing about the person they are tracking, save for the conversation. They don't know what he looks like, what his mental state is, or, most importantly.....if he is armed. This could have gone totally sideways in a heartbeat, but they are so linear focused on "the catch" that they apply no critical thinking to what is unfolding in front of them.

Noting that the volume of "catches" has come down, the attitudes are less aggressive and the volume of comments has been cut by a 1/3. Could it be that the negative pushback from the community is having an effect? Or is the shine starting to come off the adrenaline rush of playing vigilante 24/7?

thestar.comAn excellent find by RL Dakin!

First, it completely destroys Justin Payne's claim that he is the first "pedophile hunter in Canada"by several years.

Second, and probably the most important, is a question for the BC RCMP; if you were able to shut these teens down, why is it not possible to shut down the current crop of vigilantes, who pose an even greater threat to safety and privacy, than these teens ever did.

It dawned on me, today, as to why so many of the CC/CH/CB/ZCH types feel the need to create these video's, post them to Social Media and get their audience engaged in a like minded conversation. This is their Digital Drug. It has become an addiction. Whether it is the attention they get or the power they feel in the catch and post, they are being driven to do something that has no real benefit to anyone but themselves and they will do just about anything to convince people that there is a benefit, so that they can keep doing it.

Man falsely accused in Surrey Creep Catchers video received global news attention. globalnews.ca We have many professional out there (police, lawyers, law professors, etc.) saying the same thing. The methods used by the Creep Catchers are both reckless and dangerous. As a Social Media professional, hearing comments from CC leaders saying "we cannot control the actions of their followers. Of course you can.....by NOT posting this type of content and inciting a mob that cannot be controlled."

'She was a human, with loved ones': Woman's death has some lessons for Creep Catchers. cbc.ca As we have seen, today, the Creep Catchers and their supporters believe that the good they do is greater than the cost of the bad they do. I am wondering if the families of their innocent victims feel the same way?

Well, that had the desired effect.

Video has drawn out the Creep Catchers and their supporters. Unfortunately, I have my profanity filter is set to "strong" and most of their comments get hidden. Apparently most cannot voice an opinion without swearing.

Interesting note: roughly 70% of the CC supporters feel that because I do not support Creep Catchers or their operations, I simply MUST be a child molester, myself.

This is a demonstration of the free-for-all the Creep Catchers movement has become. People without any investigation training or authority, point out others who also have no training.....and are even more off the rails. There is a disconnect in communication, too, as "Dawson" (the self professed founder of the CC movement) has begun to distance himself from other Creep Catchers chapters and the me...

This is THE most important question, when it comes to the Creep Catchers. Craig E. Jones, a lawyer and Professor of Law at Thompson River University, drafted a synopsis of this question. Read it and understand that Creep Catchers (or Hunters, or Busters, or what ever name they happen to go by, touches the legal line....and often steps over it.

One of the things that we hope to educate the public on is the "bravado" of the creep catchers. In groups or when sitting behind the keyboard, they are very brazen in their comments and actions. When standing alone and facing the consequences, they are far less so.

In this series of screen shots we see the "founder" of the Creep Catchers movement, in Canada, as a near perfect demonstration of thi...

When you watch a Facebook Live broadcast, by a BC Creep Catcher leader, that slams other CC players and organizations, supports the CC player that has just been charged with criminal violations, makes threatening comment toward police and the father of an innocent CC outing victim AND does it while under the influence.....you realize that, as an anti-creep catcher advocate, all you really have to do is share and allow their own comments and content to be the vehicle of their own demise.

and child pornography is happening. It is constantly under scrutiny by the police. But it is happening in the shadows
